SOLAR ENERGY NEW? WE'VE BEEN USING IT ALL OUR LIFE.

Some people think solar energy is brand new. At Montana Power, we've been using it to produce energy all our life.

It works like this: Snow falls in the winter. In the spring the sun melts it. The resulting water flows down the rivers and through turbines at our dams, generating power for our customers.

That's one form of solar power.

We're also experimenting with solar heat for our homes. And we're anxious to participate in a project to generate power in Montana with modern wind energy conversion devices.

No big deal . . . yet. But down the road a few years these methods of producing power will be partners in our nation with coal, hydro, nuclear, geothermal, natural gas and oil in keeping the lights on and helping all of us with our jobs.

You may even have a hand in making it so.
